Hunt's Pianoforte Theory and Practice,

being a new and systematic course of instruction in the art of Reading Music and Playing the Pianoforte, with the Rules of Harmony practically illustrated in a familiar style, so as to be understood by the earliest beginners, and particularly adapted for the use of schools, by R. HUNT, Professor of Music, York.

The Author is not aware of any other published Work for teaching the Rules of Harmony in connexion with the Practice of the Pianoforte, which are here laid down so as to be readily understood and taught by those who have not previously studied thorough bass.

Part 2nd contains the rules for Transposition, and a clear exposition of the Diatonic Scale in all the Major Keys to seven sharps or flats.

London: Addison, Regent-st.; Novello, Dean-st., & Poultry.
